Product Recall Notice – Aptamil (800g) & SMA Nestle

Parents and caregivers in Seychelles are being advised of a product recall involving a specific batch of Aptamil First Infant Formula, manufactured by Danone.

Authorities in the United Kingdom have issued a warning advising parents not to use a particular batch of the product after it was found to contain a toxin known as cereulide, which can cause vomiting.

According to the UK's Food Standards Agency, the only batch affected is the 800g pack coded EXP 31-10-2026. No other batch codes or Aptamil products are impacted by this recall.

While Seychelles was not listed among the countries initially highlighted in the UK advisory, one local supplier in Seychelles is currently conducting a recall of the same affected batch as a precautionary measure.

PUBLIC ADVISORY

Parents and caregivers who may have purchased the 800g pack of Aptamil First Infant Formula with the code EXP 31-10-2026 are advised to:

- Check the packaging for the batch code and expiry date.
- Refrain from using the product if it matches the affected batch.
- Return the product to the place of purchase for further guidance or a refund.

Consumers who have concerns about a child's health after consuming the product should seek medical advice promptly.
The recall applies strictly to the identified batch.

At this time, no incidents or complaints relating to the affected products have been reported locally to the FTC.
